

duties on these materials, such as hides, iron ore, and oil, with low duties on coal and lumber.

The conference is not, as a whole, disposed to buck against this program of the President, but they do say that the conference reports it, then the President will have to get the votes for it. Moreover, they make it very plain they do not think he can get the votes. For instance, if hides are put on the free list, several Republican Senators will fight vigorously and the bill may be weakened by defection of several Senate Republicans who voted for the bill when it passed the House on coal and lumber will draw off other Senators, if they vote as they are talking now.

Hosiery Schedule Troublesome

The hosiery schedule is giving the conferees a good deal of worry. Representatives of big hosiery interests have served notice on the conferees that if the House increases are knocked out, it will be necessary to cut wages in seventy establishments in thirty-two States. Many of these are in Pennsylvania. The hosiery interests take the position that conditions have changed and the Dingley rates, which will be in effect if the House increases are knocked out, will not be adequate.

The conferees took up the cotton schedule today. Representative Payne is opposed to the Senate changes, which are widely alleged to be a reduction of the duty of 35 per cent on foreign built yachts will not be imposed. The New York millowners have been kicking hard over this proposed duty.

The conferees on the tariff bill agreed to the woolen schedule today. Three reductions were made. One of these related to spun yarn. The duty on yarns valued at 20 cents a pound and under was reduced 5 per cent. The duty on wool tops was materially reduced and was made specific.

ROTHSCHILD SINGE FOR AMERICAN GIRL

Member of Famous House Prevented From Marrying Chicago Woman.

CHICAGO, July 17.—His rich relatives preventing him from marrying a beautiful young Chicago girl is the cause of Baron Oskar Rothschild, youngest son of the famous Baron Rothschild, of Vienna, ending his life in Vienna last Monday night by firing a bullet into his brain.

This is a statement in cable advice from Vienna, which reveals the romance reading like a chapter from a novel. The Chicago girl's name is Olga Menn. She is young and the daughter of Dr. Rudolph Menn, a physician of the German Hospital here. When Baron Oskar Rothschild landed in San Francisco two months ago, he was accompanied by Captain Switzer, an Austrian nobleman, as a traveling companion. The captain became ill, and the baron hurried to Chicago for treatment for him. He was placed in the German Hospital under the care of Dr. Menn, and Rothschild visited him every day. The doctor and Rothschild became friends, and soon the physician arranged a dinner party at his home, where the baron could meet the members of his family. There Rothschild met Olga, and this romance began.

The romance progressed with such celerity that in less than a week Rothschild had declared his love and was accepted, gaining the consent of the girl's parents.

He then cabled the news of his engagement to his father in Vienna, and received in reply a cable urging him to wait for a while. Dr. Menn indorsed this, and Rothschild hurried to Europe to plead with his father after arranging for Olga to follow him to Vienna. However, the young man received a stern rebuff from his parents, who refused absolutely to consent to any alliance with an American girl.

Baron Oskar, brokenhearted, returned to Hamburg, where he told the girl of his father's decision, and the engagement was broken. Olga cabled her father, and almost simultaneously came another dispatch stating that the baron had ended his life, a suicide.

It was reported at the time he had fallen in love with the Viennese girl, but Olga Menn is the one.

ENGINE AND AUTO CRASH; KILLS ONE

Two Other Occupants of Machine Seriously Hurt. Were "Joy Riding."

NEW YORK, July 17.—One man was killed, one fatally injured, and another seriously hurt when the automobile in which they were riding, was wrecked in a collision with a Long Island railroad train at the Wood street crossing of the Long Island railroad, three miles from Long Island City, this morning.

Deputy Sheriff Edward Hurley, thirty-nine, Glen Cove, L. I., was killed instantly. Allen Perry, twenty-eight, Sea Cliff, L. I., will die, while O. D. Tappan, of New York, owner of the car was seriously hurt. A fourth member of the party, Horace T. Bannister, Glen Cove, L. I., jumped and escaped injury.

The police say the men were "joy riding." When they approached the tracks the gates were let down, but there were no lights on the gates, and Tappan, driving the car, at full speed, rushed through the first gate just as the train came along. The automobile was smashed to splinters.

NEVITT LOOKS INTO DEATH AT HOSPITAL

Coroner Nevitt this afternoon ordered an investigation of the death of William Boorman at the Government Hospital for the Insane early today. From what information the Coroner could obtain, the cause of Boorman's death was pneumonia, but it developed that he was also suffering from several fractured ribs.

How the injuries were received neither the coroner nor police could learn, and for this reason an autopsy will be performed this evening.

Boorman, supposed to have been a cook at Fort Myer, was brought to the Georgetown University Hospital about four days ago. Two days ago he was removed to St. Elizabeth's. Further than the Coroner could get no history of the case.

FIRE LADDIES READY, FIND WHEEL MISSING

Whereas, the Creedmore Department Has Resolved That Such Borrowing Must Be Stopped—George Deinheimer Had It on Buggy.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Next time there's a fire in Hinesdale or anywhere in the desolate Aurora Hose Company, of Creedmore, L. I., is going to be right on the spot long before the fire is put out and the process of rebuilding has been completed.

This can be stated on the best of authority, for the company has just voted that hereafter no member can borrow the wheels of the hose cart or any other part of the apparatus for his own use and keep it six weeks, when the dread alarm of fire, as produced by a sledge hammer hitting a wagon tire three times distinctly, is likely to come in at any moment.

This secret of the company came out today when the villagers were astonished to see the Auroras running down the Hinesdale road, dragging their machine.

When they were asked where they were running to, the firemen explained that they were going to the fire in Deacon George's Borrow' woodshed.

"Why? That was a month ago," said the villagers, "and the woodshed was all burned up, cause you fellows didn't get there, and now he's got a new one all built."

"Well, we know that," replied the firemen, as they dashed along, talking to the rest of the village, which had begun to dash along also to help the rest of the explanation. "But we've got that alarm down on our books all right and we've got to make this run just to keep the record complete and to show how quickly we could have got to that fire if somebody hadn't taken one of the rear wheels off the hose cart."

"George Deinheimer had it on his buggy and forgot all about it till yesterday. He belongs to the company, so it was all right. He was going home one night when one of his wheels came off right by the fire house, so he borrowed ours. We've reprimanded him and passed a resolution against borrowing."

REBELT THREATS AMONG SENATORS

Warren Is Leader of Personally Conducted Insurance Movement.

Revolts and near-revolts are the order of the day now in Congress. If a Senator or a Representative sees or hears of something in the tariff bill or of something that is likely to be in the bill when it comes from conference not pleasing to him, he meditates upon insurrection and then sets out to organize a revolution.

The Senate is just now the situs of a new insurrection. Until now, most of the talk of revolt has been heard in the House. But the fact that the President has taken hold of the situation on tariff with earnestness and is bearing down hard on the doctrine of free raw materials, has alarmed some of the Senators on the Republican side who are opposed to free raw materials, and if President Taft presses this issue to a test of strength on the floor, it will be found there is strenuous antagonism to the free raw material idea.

One of the Senators who is up in arms over the idea of free raw materials is Senator Warren of Wyoming. Senator Warren is one of the foremost exponents of a duty on hides. President Taft is for free hides, and has been urging the conferees to support free hides. Moreover, he came out strong for free hides when the members of the House who are anxious for free raw materials held an conference with him. This has perturbed Senator Warren, as he has Senator Carter, Senators Penrose and Oliver, Senator Elkins, Senator Scott, and some others, who are especially concerned in getting protection for raw materials.

Warren Gets Busy.

Senator Warren has set out to organize Republicans against the free raw materials idea. He entered on this work as soon as he was convinced President Taft was in earnest. Senator Warren looked about and cast his eye on the Republican insurgents. He has approached some of them with a proposition for a coalition between the insurgents and the opponents of free raw materials. Whether he will be able to effect such a coalition, however, is not certain.

According to a bit of gossip about the Capitol, Senator Warren went to Senator Dilliver and asked if the ten Republican Senators who voted against the tariff bill would join with the opponents of free raw materials to defeat the conference report.

"Well," said Dilliver, in his humorous vein, "it's asking a good deal for ten gentlemen who are moved only by conscience to join hands with a lot of fellows who are moved only by selfish interests."

This reply left it uncertain what Dilliver intended to do, and Senator Warren does not know what the men who are against the bill will do in the event of a vote on the tariff bill.

The general belief about the Capitol is that if President Taft gets the conferees to bring out a bill which provides for free iron ore, free oil, free hides and lower duties on coal, the fight over it is apt to be prolonged. It would probably not be in the House. There, the rules would bring down a vote quickly and it is not unlikely that the President would be sustained, hard as the dose would be to many members. But in the Senate, with unlimited debate, there is no telling what would happen.

In the first place, the Republicans who want duties on raw materials would doubtless talk at length in the second place, Democrats, like Bailey, who are against free raw materials, would re-enforce Senator Warren and his friends. What the Senate insurgents would do would depend on whether there was revision downward in other scheduled bills relating to raw materials.

Opinions of well-informed members of Congress are that it is not at all improbable a tangle will result that will delay the bill for weeks. Some pessimists are beginning to talk about September once more.

Just at this time, more talk is being heard about the defeat of the pending tariff bill than has been heard at any time yet. One Republican Senator today said:

"It looks to me as if President Taft, by urging free raw materials, will force on Congress the veto of this measure."

He added that he believed the country generally would be better satisfied with the Dingley law than with the measure which seems likely to be evolved.

It was hot weather that hurried the Senate along the bill in the first place. Now the wise ones are saying that if by any chance the passage of the bill is delayed until the middle of August, when the cool nights will begin to return, the special session may take on a new lease of life.

NEW SUTTON PROBE MAY MEAN SHAKE-UP

Reorganization of Academy Administration May Follow Investigation of Death.

ANNAPOLIS, July 17.—Whether the verdict of a second board of inquiry into the death of Lieutenant Sutton, a suicide or murder, a shake-up in naval circles is predicted today.

The attorneys for Mrs. Sutton will be permitted to probe the entire "code of honor" said to rule in the Naval Academy during the hearing and if the suicide verdict is confirmed it will be up to the members of the House to prescribe a more strict discipline for the young officers. It is even possible that a reorganization of the administration may follow if the evidence discloses the extent to which this "code" is in force.

If the board of inquiry decide that Sutton did not commit suicide, then manslaughter charges may be developed.

In the rehearing of the case which begins Monday, eve, thing will be open. Every witness will be permitted to tell everything he knows which bears on the case. Mrs. Sutton was compelled to agree to this before the Navy Department would reopen the case. Mrs. Sutton is alleged to have said, "There is nothing about Jimmy's life that cannot be said in open court."

Three Mooted Theories.

Officers in the Marine Corps and in the navy have discarded all but three theories as to the death of young Sutton. These are suicide by command of the code, suicide because he feared he had killed Lieutenant Roelker, or death resulting from a duel. There has been discovered some evidence leading to the belief that Sutton went to the encounter in which he lost his life, believing that he was going to a duel. As he was a crack shot he had no reluctance in accepting a duel if one was offered.

In a letter now in the possession of Mrs. Sutton, it is alleged that Sutton went out on the parade grounds to fight a duel and he took with him two revolvers, intending to settle the matter right there. He was not to be killed by accident or the result of blind passion, but to the call of duty which is unwritten law among young naval officers.

Prepared for Duel.

According to the theory which has been built up on the discovery of this letter hinting at a duel, it is declared that Sutton came to the rendezvous with two pistols, prepared to fight a duel on the spot. The other officer suggested "cutting" the gun, and Sutton, who was in a humor, in his humor, "it's asking a good deal for ten gentlemen who are moved only by conscience to join hands with a lot of fellows who are moved only by selfish interests."

"DRYS" A BRISTOL FIGHT

BRISTOL, Tenn., July 17.—Charging that 107 persons who voted wet in the local option election held here July 8, and who had been paid by others, and giving the names of those who were voters, the temperance people today filed a petition in the corporation court asking that the election be either set aside or that the illegal votes be stricken out. This would show a large dry majority.

It is charged that over a hundred persons, most of whom were outside the State or outside the city limits. The petition also names certain persons who voted wet, who are said to be disqualified by reason of having been convicted of crime. The charge that more than one hundred persons did not pay their poll taxes out of their own funds, as required by the Virginia law. These persons are called by name, and the list includes some well-known citizens.

The petition avers that there were only 263 legal votes cast in favor of licensing saloons, and that, of the 423 illegal returns as favoring license, 170 are illegal.

TROOPS CALLED OUT LONGSHAW VOUCHES FOR TAFT'S VISIT

He Charges Mrs. Longshaw, Who Was Miss L. C. Paine, With Abandonment.

ELLA GINGLES' TRIAL TO END MONDAY

Girl's Attorney, in Plea, Defends Her Story and Denounces State.

CHICAGO, July 17.—At the close of the final plea for Ella Gingles, on trial for larceny of lace from Miss Agnes Barrette, her former employer, which was made by Attorney Patrick H. O'Donnell, the jury asked for an adjournment until Monday morning when Assistant State's Attorney B. J. Short will close the case.

Mr. O'Donnell made an appeal to the jury that brought tears to the eyes of several of them. He declared the testimony given in the girl's trial was a "glib nature" as to give State Attorney Wayman a chance to write his name among the great if he would only take advantage of it. O'Donnell denounced the State's case as a "hoax" and declared that he had put into the mouth of Ella Gingles the story which she repeated on the stand.

The State has charged that I put the name of Tom Taggart in this girl's mouth. They had to abandon that when they learned that Ella told the same story to others before she told it to me. Then, they tried to show that this girl got her story from reading medical treatises. Mr. Short's admission that her story was scientifically true shows that she was telling the truth. No human mind could have concocted that story.

In his preliminary address to the jury, State Attorney Short declared that Ella Gingles was a natural liar with a fertile mind.

THOUSANDS SAVED IN DISTRICT COAL

Commissioners Lower Price of Contract by $6,896 Less Than Last Year.

After rejecting all former bids and for the third time inviting proposals for coal for the fiscal year beginning July 1, the Commissioners have effected a saving of $6,896 over the sum expended last year, and of $2,392 over the lowest figure submitted to the general supply committee with purchases for the Federal Government.

The amount of the contract is $164,610.80, which will be divided among J. Edward Chapman, W. W. Griffith, J. P. Agnew & Co., and Griffith Murphy.

PLAN GOES WRONG FOR TAFT'S VISIT

Change of Date for Veterans' Reunion Not Convenient for President.

The President will not go to the meeting of Confederate Veterans, Fisher's Hill, Va., July 24, as had been hoped by those in charge of the reunion.

Senator Daniel, of Virginia, called at the White House today and told the President that C. M. Buran, a Confederate veteran in charge of the meeting, had told him that it was impossible for the railroad running to Fisher's Hill to secure enough equipment to handle the crowds that would be attracted by the President's presence.

This difficulty can be obviated by August 7, when the meeting will be held, but at that time the President will not be able to go.
